PSYCHOLOGICAL COUNSELING FOR ZOOLOGY STUDENTS DURING THE PANDEMIC REPORT

March 2021 Resource Person: Dr. Balachandran, Assistant Professor Head of the Department of Psychology and Dr. Ramprabhu, Assistant Professor of Psychology

Department of Zoology organized a psychological counseling session for its students during the challenging pandemic period of the COVID-19 through Google meet. The session aimed to address the emotional and psychological well-being of the students who were navigating the academic challenges and personal stressors brought about by the pandemic.

Key Highlights:

- 1. Introduction and Welcome: The counseling session began with a warm welcome by Dr. G. Krishnamoorthy, Head of the Department and gave an introduction to the importance of mental health, especially during a pandemic.
 - 2. Identifying Stressors: Dr. Balachandran, Assistant Professor and Head of the Department have engaged the students in open discussions to identify the various stressors they were facing, such as academic pressures, isolation, and uncertainty about the future.
 - 3. Coping Strategies: The resource person shared practical coping strategies and techniques to manage stress, anxiety, and emotional well-being. These strategies included mindfulness exercises, relaxation techniques, and time management tips.
 - 4. Emotional Support: Students were encouraged to express their emotions and concerns openly. The resource person provided a safe space for them to discuss their feelings and experiences.
 - 5. Academic Guidance: Resource person offered guidance on how to adapt to online learning, maintain study routines, and seek academic support when needed.
 - 6. Self-Care and Wellness: The importance of self-care and wellness practices, such as maintaining a healthy lifestyle, staying connected with friends and family, and seeking professional help when necessary, was discussed.
 - 7. Individual Consultations: The session included a question-and-answer segment where students could ask specific questions related to their mental health concerns. Additionally, individual consultations were offered to students who required personalized support.
- Takeaways: The counseling session provided students with valuable tools and resources to manage their mental health during the pandemic. Students learned the importance of seeking help when needed and that they were not alone in their struggles.
- Conclusion: The psychological counseling session for Zoology students during the pandemic period played a crucial role in addressing their emotional and psychological needs. It created a supportive environment for students to share their challenges, learn coping strategies, and prioritize their mental well-being during these unprecedented times. The programme was ended with vote of thanks by Dr. S. Nagaraj, Assistant Professor of Zoology.
