Enclave tourism

Local businesses often see their chances to earn income from tourists severely reduced by the creation of "all-inclusive" vacation packages.

When tourists remain for their entire stay at the same Cruise ship or resort, which provides everything they need And where they will make all their expenditures, not much Opportunity is left for local people to profit from tourism.

All-inclusive hotels generate the largest amount of revenue But their impact on the economy is smaller per dollar of Revenue than other accommodation types.

All-inclusives also import more and employed fewer people per dollar of revenue than other hotels.

Smaller trickle-down effect on local economies.

The cruise ship industry provides another example of economic enclave tourism.

Non-river cruises carried some 8.7 million International passengers in 1999.

On many ships, especially in the Caribbean, guests are encouraged to spend most of their time and money on board, and opportunities to spend in some ports are closely managed and restricted.

Infrastructure cost

Tourism development can cost the local government and Local taxpayers a great deal of money.

Developers may want the government to improve the airport, roads and other infrastructure, and possibly to provide tax breaks and other financial advantages, which Are costly activities for the government.

Public resources spent on subsidized infrastructure or tax breaks may reduce government investment in other critical areas such as education and health.
